

Dr. Claudette Jackson Palmer received her bachelor's degree from Morris Brown College and master's and specialist degrees from Augusta State University. Dr. Jackson Palmer received a doctorate degree from Georgia Southern University. She is currently employed as the Coordinator of Disability Services at University of South Carolina Aiken. Dr. Palmer has worked in special education for over 30 years. Her experience as a classroom teacher, master teacher, and special education program specialist and currently coordinator of disability has allowed her to become familiar with laws, rules, and regulations that govern special education eligibility and placement of students with disabilities in special education. As a former program specialist for Richmond County Schools Dr. Palmer served as a liaison between central office, the department of special education and school-based administration on issues related to special education staffing and programming. She assisted general and special education staff with the implementation of effective instructional programs, assisted with the design, implementation, and evaluation of programs and services to ensure compliance with state rules and regulations. Dr. Jackson Palmer also works with parents to ensure that they are familiar with parental rights and procedural safeguards and has conducted numerous workshops and presentations to parents, teachers and other school personnel.